THE REPUBLICAN.

Established 1869. BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1912. Vol. 43, No. 12

ROOSEVELT FOLLOWERS CONTROL CONVENTION

Led by Ex-Senator Flinn They Win Over Penrose at Harrisburg.

TICKET IS NOMINATED

R. K. Young, for State Treasurer, and A. W. Powell, Auditor General—Phil. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg, Alternate National Delegate.

The Roosevelt forces controlled the Republican State convention, at Harrisburg, yesterday, dictating both the nomination of candidates and the framing of the platform. The Roosevelt followers were led by Ex-Senator William Flinn, of Pittsburg, an old-time political foe of Senator Penrose. The Roosevelt delegates were largely in the majority and the program mapped out by Flinn was carried through.

Centre County's delegates, George N. Fisher, of Boalsburg, and Harry P. Austin, of Milesburg, voted with the Roosevelt forces on the selection of delegates-at-large but with the Penrose faction in supporting Wright for State Treasurer. The only contest in the convention was that for State Treasurer. Robert K. Young received 244 votes; State Treasurer Wright, 108, and Major Gherst, of Reading, 12.

Henry G. Wasson, of Pittsburg, was elected State Chairman, with A. Nevin Deitrich, of Chambersburg, and Fred C. Wilson, of Philadelphia, as Secretaries. The State headquarters will be in Philadelphia.

H. C. Quigley was elected Centre County's representative in the State Convention.

Philip E. Womelsdorff, of Philipsburg, was named as an alternate delegate-at-large to the Chicago national convention.

The convention nominated the following ticket:

State Treasurer—Robert K. Young, Tioga County.

Auditor General—A. W. Powell, Allegheny County.

Congressman-at-Large—A. H. Walters, of Johnstown; John M. Morin, of Pittsburg; Fred E. Lewis, of Allentown, and Arthur R. Rupley, of Carlisle.

National Delegates-at-Large—E. A. VanValkenburg, Ziba T. Moore, Philadelphia; A. P. Moore, Pittsburg; H. H. Gilkeson, Phoenixville; W. R. Young Pottstown; W. S. Tompkins, Luzerne County; W. H. Hackenburg, Milton; George R. Scull, Somerset County; W. W. Kincaid, Meadville; Lex Mitchell, Punxsutawney; Fred W. Brown, Elk County.

Alternates-at-Large—Virgin D. Acker, Harry B. Meyers, Lewistown; R. A. Orbison, Huntingdon; Fred S. Drake, Philadelphia; B. F. Madore, P. E. Womelsdorff, Center; L. O. McLain, Crawford; Oscar J. Denny, Mercer; W. L. McCullongh, Pittsburg.

The convention named a committee of nine to recommend progressive legislation to the next Legislature.

Filed Campaign Expenses.

Statements showing expenditures in the recent campaign in Centre County have been filed with Prothonotary Foreman. Saturday was the last day for filing such accounts. Congressman Patton filed his account with the clerk of the House, at Washington, as is required by the federal law. Apparently unfamiliar with the State law some defeated candidates at the primaries filed no statements of expenditures. Two aspirants, only filed statements giving expenditures in excess of $50. They were Robert M. Foster, of State College, Democratic nominee for the Assembly, and Guy B. Mayo, of Smethport, who was elected as a Roosevelt delegate to the Republican national convention. Mr. Foster filed a statement giving his campaign expenses as amounting to $77. Mr. Mayo filed an account for $62.16. The amounts in each instance are itemized, the charges being chiefly for newspaper announcements, postage, railroad fare, livery hire and hotel bills. The following filed statements setting forth that their expenditures did not exceed $50: H. C. Quigley, A. B. Kimport, E. G. Boose, W. Harrison Walker, Abraham Weber, James A. Gleason, John C. Barclay, G. W. Mattern, Samuel H. Wigton, C. L. Gramley, P. Gray Meek, G. L. Goodhart, Frank P. Slocum, George N. Fisher and Harry P. Austin.

Call New Pastor.

Philipsburg Lutherans at a congregational meeting on Sunday, last, extended Rev. J. H. Keller, of Hampstead, Maryland, a unanimous call. Thus far he has not accepted, but it is believed that he will do so.

FIFTH HOLDS REUNION

Spanish-American War Veterans Celebrate at Fifth Annual Convention.

Assembled in their fifth annual convention, Spanish-American war veterans of the old Fifth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers Infantry, U. S. A., transacted routine business, arranged for the holding of next year's reunion and topped off the program with a most delightful and successful banquet at the Brockerhoff House here on Friday night of last week. The occasion brought together once more many of those who responded to the call to arms and went out as soldiers of Uncle Sam when the United States declared war against Spain. Recalling that time and the present was the neat inscription on the banquet menu,

"April 27, 1898—April 27, 1912."

The banquet was held one night earlier than the exact anniversary date. This was done to enable those from distant points to return to their respective homes before Sunday. Colonel Hugh S. Taylor, who headed the old regiment in 1898, was the central figure of the occasion. At the banquet he was eulogized by many who had served in his command. All praised him as the born soldier and military commander.

It was late when Toastmaster Dr. M. J. Locke in a happy speech welcomed the visitors to Bellefonte. The delay in gathering about the tables in the prettily decorated banquet hall was occasioned by the presence of many of the visiting soldiers being in attendance at the inspection of Company L, N. G. P., at the armory. When the inspection was concluded the inspecting officers and also those of Company L joined in the celebration of the old Fifth.

Deitrick's orchestra furnished the music for the banquet, and following the welcoming address by Dr. Locke, and prayer by Professor James R. Hughes, Judge Ellis L. Orvis was introduced. The keynote to his remarks was the phrase coined by Sherman, "War is hell." He vividly recalled the sinking of the Maine and depicted how American hearts demanded vengeance. Brief, but brilliant, his remarks held the closest attention of all about the tables.

When Colonel Taylor was introduced as the next speaker he was accorded an ovation that must have amply rewarded him for the years he has devoted to military affairs. He modestly acknowledged the tribute, and in responding to his toast warmly applauded the officers and men who comprised the old Fifth. Others who spoke included Colonel Fulmer, of Lewisburg, at present commanding the Twelfth Regiment; Major Rutherford, of Scranton, inspecting officer doing service among National Guard regiments; George T. Bush, Burgess John J. Bower, Henry C. Quigley, J. Linn Harris, Adjutant Robert F. Hunter, Major John E. Dunkle, Sergeant Charles R. Simpson, Captain Henry Taylor, a Civil war veteran; Sergeant Joe Butler, Lieutenant Pierce and Rev. John Hewitt.

The committee on arrangements consisted of Major R. G. H. Hayes, chairman; N. B. Spangler, Dr. David Dale, Philip H. Garbrick, Lieutenant E. R. Taylor and Samuel D. Gettig.

The reunion next year will be held at Altoona.

CO. L. INSPECTED

Bellefonte Company of National Guard Made Fine Showing Friday Night.

Company L, Twelfth Infantry, Third Brigade, Pennsylvania National Guard, showed up in fine shape at the regular inspection, which was held in the Armory on Friday night of last week. The inspecting officer was Major A. G. Rutherford, of Scranton, and while he subjected the Bellefonte soldiers to a rigid test they rendered a good account of themselves and passed an inspection which should give them a fine rating in the Twelfth Regiment.

Quite a few Bellefonte citizens attended the inspection. A few minutes before 8 o'clock Company L lined up, with Captain William H. Brown, First Lieutenant Richard Taylor and Second Lieutenant Linn Blackford in command. As compared with the turnout in other towns nearby, the attendance of members of Company L was remarkably large, virtually a full command being present.

The officers and men acquitted themselves with credit and at the conclusion of the inspection were complimented by the inspecting officer on the showing made.

File $4,000,000 Mortgage.

The four million dollar mortgage of the Penn Public Service company, operating in Centre, Clearfield, Cambria and Indiana counties, has been filed for record in the recorder's office, in Bellefonte. The instrument covers seventy pages of typewritten matter.

IGNORES LAW COVERING UNSEATED LAND SALES

County Treasurer Miller Does Not Advertise in all County Papers.

LAW SAYS HE SHALL

Distributes Advertising to Favored Few, Denying to Readers of Other Newspapers Information to Which they are Entitled.

County Treasurer John D. Miller, who assumed office on January 1st, has arbitrarily refused to comply with the State law governing the advertising of unseated lands to be offered at public sale. His reason for ignoring the law, which is specific on the subject, was that he desired to favor a few newspapers at the expense of all others in Centre County. His predecessors in the office of the county treasurer gracefully and properly complied with the law and tendered the advertising to all the newspapers.

The State law specifically states that where a fee of $1 a tract is charged at public sale for advertising the advertisement must be placed in all the newspapers in the county. Where a fee of but 50 cents a tract is charged the advertisement may be placed in but two newspapers. Treasurer Miller is arranging to hold his sale of unseated lands under the law fixing the $1 fee. He has not, however, complied with that part of the law directing that the advertisements be offered to all the newspapers in Centre County. In substantiation of this assertion we hereby set forth that Treasure Miller did not place with or tender this newspaper the advertising of unseated lands which this week appears in the few newspapers he wished to favor. In the judgment of some lawyers the sale to be conducted by Treasurer Miller will not be legal, and should it prove that titles are therefore defective the responsibility will rest upon him.

The law providing the manner in which sales of unseated lands shall be advertised in all the newspapers was designed particularly to give such sales the widest publicity possible. Readers of "The Republican" are entitled to know what tracts of unseated lands are offered for sale by Treasurer Miller. The law requires that he give our readers this information in the form of a public advertisement in these columns. The only conclusion we are able to arrive at is that as a public official he lacks a proper conception of and respect for the law and also for the rights of the several thousand readers of this newspaper.

Is Candidate in Chicago.

Centre County friends of Rev. Elmer L. Williams, formerly of Unionville, were agreeably surprised last week to learn that he had recently been nominated for the Legislature out in Chicago. Mr. Williams is a splendid type of young manhood and during his stay in Chicago he has won for himself an enviable reputation as a pronounced foe of vice in all lines. On several occasions he has personally conducted raids where the police failed to suppress vice in the territory covered by his church. Recently he was urged to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Legislature, but he declined to enter the field as an active candidate. There were twelve avowed aspirants in the field, and Mr. Williams modestly but firmly stated that he would not make a personal canvass for the honor. The church workers in his district secured his promise to accept the nomination in the event they should win it for him. They went to work with a determination to succeed, and when the vote was counted Mr. Williams was returned an easy winner. The honor is one of which he may justly be proud. The fact that the church people in his section voluntarily turned in and nominated him testifies to the high esteem in which he is held in the field of his labors.

Open Air Schools.

The State Board of Education has received a very interesting report from Supt. Chas. Lose of Williamsport, Pa., concerning the establishment of an Open Air School in that city. About 20 children are provided for in this school and the results indicate that the children are gaining in physical strength as well as making rapid strides in their studies. The children greatly enjoy the work and the prejudice on the part of the parents, which was considerable at the outset, has been entirely removed. There is no doubt that schools of this character will be greatly multiplied and that children who have some physical affliction, who are anaemic or tubercular, can be well taken care of in this way.

CENTURY OLD WOMAN SUMMONED BY DEATH

Mrs. Elizabeth Hicks Passed Away in WarriorsMark Valley.

RECALLED INDIAN DAYS

Alert, Mentally and Physically, She Delighted to Tell of Girlhood Experience When Surrounding Country Was an Unbroken Forest.

Mrs. Hannah Hicks, of Half-Moon valley, died at her late home there last Friday at the advanced age of 99 years. She was a life-long Methodist and by some it is believed she was the oldest woman in Centre County. She would have been 100 years September 23, next. Funeral services were held from the late home on Sunday afternoon, being attended by not only many neighbors and friends from that section but by numerous others from Tyrone and other places. Rev. M. J. Runyan officiated. Interment was made in the Graysville cemetery. Mrs. Hicks was during her entire life a member of the Half-Moon Methodist Episcopal church and was the oldest communicant of the Methodist Episcopal faith in Centre, Blair and Huntingdon counties. She retained her faculties unimpaired until a few days before her death and could recall the stirring events of early American history with the details of a person half her years. Friends of the aged lady delighted in hearing her tell of the daring rescues of southern slaves during the early period. Still more vividly did she rehearse tales of the Mexican conflict and the excitement that attended the Lincoln-Douglas debates prior to the Civil war.

TO ADDRESS FARMERS

State Officials Among Speakers at Institute at Towanda May 21-24.

The State's program of highway construction, what the State is doing to halt the chestnut tree blight, live stock sanitation, concrete for use in buildings on the farm, horse breeding, control of fruit tree pests and soil efficiency are among the practical subjects of agriculture which State officials will present at the farmers' annual normal institute to be held in the Court House at Towanda, May 21-24. Governor John K. Tener, under whose administration many of these projects have been begun or pushed along to a high state of efficiency, will also be one of the speakers. He will reply on behalf of the State to addresses of welcome by Judge William Maxwell, of Bradford county; Burgess G. E. Frost, of Towanda, and President Benjamin Kuykendall, of the county agricultural society.

Highway Commissioner E. M. Bigelow will speak on the first day on the new road law; D. B. Detweiler, of the Chestnut Tree Blight Commission, on the blight crusade; H. E. Van Norman, State College, on dairy cows; F. H. Fasset, orchard expert on orchards; State Veterinarian C. J. Marshall, on live stock; Dr. Carl W. Gay, University of Pennsylvania, on horse breeding; Miss Mary A. Burnite, New York, on home hygiene; Mrs. T. E. Powers, Pennsdale, on rural uplift; Dr. A. L. Martin, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, on farmers' educational work; Willard Young, Wilmington, on dynamite on farms; Franklin Menges, York, on co-operation on farms; E. S. Fowler, Chicago, on concrete on the farm; W. H. Stout, Pine Grove, on natural history on the farm; Professor R. V. Mitchell, State College, on modern dressing of poultry.

Other men prominent in State agricultural work will speak and there will be inspection visits and demonstrations.

Tyrone Gets Six Licenses.

After being completely dry for a month or more, the town of Tyrone was on Tuesday granted six liquor licenses by Judge Baldrige. One license, that of the Central Hotel, was refused. In granting the six licenses Judge Baldrige explained that he had held all in abeyance so long in order to punish those who had, knowingly or otherwise, violated the law. The fact that the licenses had been held up so long had led many of the residents of Tyrone to believe that the town would continue to be dry during the next year.

Lost Hunting Arbutus.

While Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hoffman, of Philipsburg, were in the woods hunting for trailing arbutus last Sunday they lost their bearings and were unable to find their way home. Along about midnight Sunday night they finally landed at Sandy Ridge, where they remained until Monday morning, at which time they returned home by train.

YOUNG MOTHER'S DEATH

Mrs. Harry M. Stere Passed Away Suddenly at Unionville.

Sad beyond the power of words to tell was the sudden death on Saturday, last, of Mrs. Harry M. Stere at her late home at Unionville. On the preceding day the home of the Steres had been filled with joy and rejoicing, a little child having been born to gladden the hearts of the young parents. Twenty-four hours later the happiness was turned into the keenest grief, for death claimed the young mother. Following the birth of her child Mrs. Stere suffered a sinking spell, and although she battled bravely to live an all-wise Providence willed otherwise and surrounded by those she loved most dearly she quietly and peacefully slept away. The news of her sad and untimely death was received by the community with expressions of deep and sincere sorrow, for by all she was liked and held in high esteem.

Funeral services were held from the late home on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Revs. Mr. Ziegler, Kelly and Wagner. Interment was made in the upper cemetery at Unionville.

Before her marriage ten years ago Mrs. Stere was Elizabeth Miles, She was born in Huston township and had she lived until July 6th, next, she would have been 30 years old. Ten years ago she was married to Harry M. Stere, a well known young business man at Unionville. Two children had already blessed their union, and with the grief-stricken father they survive to mourn the loss of a good wife an affectionate, loving mother.

GYPSY PICKPOCKET

Woman With Winning Smile Deftly Touched Lock Haven Man for $31.

Bellefonte sports who may be heavily weighted down with long green may have an opportunity to be relieved of some of it and at the same time have their fortunes told, should a band of gypsies recently camped near Lock Haven head this way. The Lock Haven "Democrat" on Monday published the following of how a traveling man was touched for $31 by a gypsy, whose stock in trade was a winning smile and some nimble fingers:

A band of gypsies, about 25 in number, of which several were women, visited Mill Hall Saturday and worked the flim-flam game on a well known traveling man in quite a slick way—in fact, so expert were the women at the game, that said traveling man did not discover his loss until some time afterwards. The two men who worked the game were certainly slick articles and when the man discovered his loss he looked and no doubt felt like 30 cents.

The two women went into the Clinton house office and asked if any one wanted their fortune told and the traveling man who by the way is a game one, volunteered to have his past and future revealed. He placed a coin in the woman's hand and she delivered her "speil" in a very nice, smooth way, and which was accepted by the audience as having a certain amount of truth connected with it.

She then told him that there were some secrets connected with his career which she supposed he would not like everybody to know, and suggested that they retire to another room, where she would the secrets unfold. Barkus was willing and they went. Here she told him that ordinary specie would not answer her purpose and he would have to produce some "long green" which he did by opening his wallet which contained about $97 in bills. She deftly extracted several bills and again made her "speil," afterwards putting the bills back into his wallet, which he still held open in his hands. The woman then left saying to the man, "you are easy," at which remark he laughed heartily. The women left and some time afterward Landlord Long told the man he had better count his money which he did and to his amazement found that he was $31 short.

He went to 'Squire W. J. Peters and had a warrant sworn out and Officer Myers, of Lock Haven, was summoned to execute the same. He arrived in a short time and accompanied by the man who had been beat and Charles R. Packar, the clerk, proceeded to Flemington where the gypsies were camped. When they reached there they found that the party had broken camp, and by actual time, the tearing down of the tents and the getting away from Flemington was accomplished in just 13 minutes.

Myers however was not going to let his quarry get away, and the posse after them and rounded them up near the power house. The chief offender, however, seemed to be among the missing, but here Myers showed his ability as a detective and going to one of the wagons found her buried under a pile of blankets.

BOALSBURG MERCHANT GETS NOISY SERENADE

Wedding of S. M. Bell on Tuesday Celebrated by Friends.

ESCORTED TO STATION

Bride and Groom Conducted to Train by Three or Four Gaily Decorated Teams—Refusing to Get Mad they Join Heartily in Fun.

When S. M. Bell, the popular and well known Boalsburg merchant and tea agent, concluded that it was time for the wedding bells to ring out in joy and gladness for him his host of friends not only rejoiced also but quickly planned a serenade celebration that would eclipse anything of the kind ever attempted before. The entire town of Boalsburg enlisted in the plans, and when Boalsburg people do things they do them up brown.

On Tuesday, at noon, Mr. Bell led to the altar Mrs. Louella Steckel, of Harrisburg, the nuptial knot being tied by Rev. S. C. Stover. The happy consumation of their romance let loose all the pent up enthusiasm of the groom's countless friends, and until the afternoon train departed with the bride and groom on board there was something doing every minute.

Three or four teams, each gayly decorared with old shoes, etc., escorted Mr. Bell and his bride to the train, meanwhile a racket being kept up that awakened the entire town and brought everybody to the street. On one of the wagons was a sign reading, "Married at last." There was nothing for Mr. and Mrs. Bell to do but to surrender to the wishes and plans of the serenaders, and they made the best of it by joining heartily in the fun. The serenaders remained on duty until the train departed, when everybody joined in extending best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Bell for a happy honeymoon tour and also many, many years of prosperity.

Code Requires Playgrounds.

The State Board of Education has decided that hereafter it will approve no plans for school houses unless proper provision is made for playgrounds. This seems to be a move in the right direction. The physical activity of the child must be provided for in order to secure an all around education. If children are given an opportunity to express themselves in play, they will not resort to practices which interfere with the good order of the community in which they live. No educational movement in the last ten years has attracted as much attention as the movement for the welfare of the child as it can be best conserved in giving it opportunities for proper physical expression.

Hospital Notes.

Operations—Miss Gertrude Kane, Miss Elizabath Cunningham, Daniel McGinley, aged 2 years, Bellefonte; Mrs. Margaret Harper, Centre Hall; Mrs. Marcella Shope, Milesburg; Mrs. Jennie Clevenstine, Zion.

Admitted for treatment—Miss Mary Graden, Bellefonte; Rev. J. S. Shultz, Pine Grove Mills.

Discharged—Mrs. Eva Behers, Stormstown; Eldon Leathers, Snow Shoe; Mrs. McCoy and daughter, Bellefonte.

34 patients in the hospital.

Installed Modern Machinery.

W. H. Twigg, proprietor of the Palace Bakery, at Philipsburg, recently installed an electric bread and cake mixer. By putting in this modern machinery Mr. Twigg increased his baking capacity to 1000 loaves of bread per day, to say nothing of a big output of cakes, pies, etc. Mr. Twigg is always abreast of the times, which accounts for much of his success.

An Old Cake of Soap.

On exhibition in the "Herald" office at Tyrone is an old piece of hand-made soap. It was made by Mrs. Samuel Wilson on the old Wilson farm, at Pennington, Pa., and bears the date of March, 1845.

Water Motor For Sale.

A Backus Water Motor for sale at this office. Is 33 inches in diameter and is in first-class condition. Can be seen in operation at any time. Call or inquire at "The Republican" office, Bellefonte, Pa.

Predicts Cold Summer.

J. M. Bloom, of Curwensville, who claims to be a weather sharp, predicts a cold summer, and says he will not be surprised to see frost in July.

Academy Boys and Girls of 44 Years Ago.

Forty-four years ago the trustees of the Bellefonte Academy—twenty-three in number extended a formal call to Rev. James P. Hughes to come to Bellefonte and take charge of what is now one of the most successful and leading preparatory schools in the country. Of the twenty-three signers to that call there are but two living today, namely, General James A. Beaver and John P. Harris. The fact that twenty-one of the twenty-three signers had passed into the Great Beyond and that the two remaining signers are still enjoying splendid health, prompted the writer to mention the incident to the venerable Principal Emeritus of the Academy, and to this we added the suggestion that he search among his old papers and see if he might come across the original letter. The mere mention of the subject seemed to awaken a flood of pleasant recollections, for despite his advanced years Mr. Hughes is remarkably active and alert, mentally and physically.

"That letter," said he, "undoubtedly had the shaping up of my career. I remember it very well. I was then in Logansport, Indiana. Along came this letter from Bellefonte, asking me to come and take charge of the Academy here. At the same time there came another letter, one asking me to take charge of a school farther west than Logansport. It was immaterial to me which I accepted, so I put the matter up to my wife. She was in favor of Bellefonte and her reasons being good and sufficient I decided to accept Bellefonte's offer. That was forty-four years ago. Now all but General Beaver and John P. Harris of those signing the call are dead.

"When I came to Bellefonte the public schools were located in what is now the Academy. The old private school had run down and I came here to build it up. I remember Hastings had charge of the public schools at that time. We went to work to build up the Academy and since those days the school has sent hundreds of good men and women out into the world prepared to meet and master its problems."

Following out the writer's suggestion that he look among his old papers for the original letter inviting him to come to Bellefonte Mr. Hughes came across the first catalogue of the Academy issued after he took charge. He was unable to find the old letter, but the catalogue he unearthed is even more interesting, speaking in a general sense, for it not only contains the names of the twenty-three trustees but a complete roster of the school that year. Many of those whose names appear as students are long since dead. Others are living, some mothers or fathers and grandmothers or grandfathers. Many of the names, then listed as students, are now recorded as among our foremost citizens. The corps of instructors in 1868 consisted of Rev. J. P. Hughes, as principal; Mrs. E. W. Hughes, preceptress; L. S. Roberts and J. V. R. Hughes, assistants. We reproduce herewith the list of members of the Board of Trustees as it appears in the interesting old catalogue:

Rev. Alfred Yeomans, president.
Hon. Samuel Linn, secretary.
William P. Wilson, treasurer.
Ex-Governor A. G. Curtin,
Dr. William J. Wilson,
James Armor, Esq,
H. N. McAllister,
Dr. John Harris,
Harvey Mann,
E. C. Humes,
Joseph Green,
Gen. James A. Beaver,
Adam Hoy,
A. S. Valentine,
Edmund Blanchard,
Jacob V. Thomas,
A. O. Furst,
R. B. Valentine,
George M. Yocum,
John P. Harris,
Samuel VanTries,
Charles McCafferty,
Dr. E. W. Hale.

During that year the Academy had sixty-seven students, thirty girls and thirty-seven boys. The names of the girl students may not be easily identified by some of the younger generation of today, but each name will no doubt be at once familiar to those who forty years or so ago were boys or girls. The roster of the sixty-seven students, appearing in the old Academy catalogue, follows:

What Marriage Offers a Woman.

In an article on "The American Girl" in the May Woman's Home Companion, J. Ellsen Laurvik says:

"What has marriage to offer in compensation for the many things of which it deprives her, is a question that the young Miss of to-day asks herself with a growing scepticism. What opportunities of enjoyment does it hold that are not open to her before marrying? And with an increasing sophistication she confidently answers, 'None,' weighing with the greatest nicety the actual and known joys of girlhood against the problematical and restricted joys of wifehood. And not infrequently all the fuss and feathers attending her engagement is merely the paraphernalia of the most delightful make-believe ever invented, in which the girl pretends to the man that she regards him as the noblest and handsomest of human beings, while secretly in her heart she feels herself superior to him or any other mere men! At least that is the half-veiled attitude to-day in certain sections of American society, whose women members have come to adopt definitely the view that the girl has nothing to expect from marriage that she did not already possess; that, instead, she is confronted with certain definite duties attendant upon the care of a household which, if not positively distasteful to her, are certainly not to be regarded as sources of actual pleasure. It must be admitted that she is far oftener right than wrong in arriving at this conclusion, and who will blame her for refusing to allow herself to be either cajoled or coerced into assuming a relationship that offers so few opportunities for self-development as does the average home of to-day?"

Strange Action of a Baseball.

Following is an interesting story told by Hugh S. Fullerton in the May American Magazine, in an article describing freak plays that have won big baseball games:

"On the old Washington grounds when Washington was in the National League, the players left the field by passing under the stands, and the entrance to the passage was closed by a cellar door arrangement which sloped down to the ground. The doors, of course, were kept closed during games, but at the top, cut in the planks of the stand, was a small square hole to permit the players to reach through and unlatch the doors when they desired to leave the field. During one game I saw a ball, which had been thrown wild to the plate in an effort to cut off the tying run, roll up the doors and disappear through that hole. The batter circled the bases and scored the winning run. The Chicago club, under Anson, was beaten and protested the game on the ground that the opening existed in violation of the rules. In the investigation of the complaint an attempt was made to force a ball through the hole and although it was pounded with a bat the ball refused to pass through the hole until the cover gave way. After that almost every team that came on the grounds tried to put balls through the hole and failed. How that thrown ball managed to twist its way through the aperture never has been explained satisfactorily."

WORK THAT TELLS

Plenty of it Has Been Done Right Here in Bellefonte.

Cures that last are cures that tell. To thoroughly know the virtues of a medicine you must investigate the cures and see if they prove permanent. Doan's Kidney Pills stand this test, and plenty of proof exists right here in Bellefonte. People who testified years ago to relief from backache, kidney and urinary disorders, now declare that relief was permanent and the cure perfect. How can any Bellefonte sufferer longer doubt the evidence.

Mrs. James Corl, 361 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "A member of my family used Doan's Kidney Pills in 1907, procuring them from Green's Pharmacy Co., and a complete cure of kidney complaint was effected. At that time we publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills and as there has been no recurrence of the trouble, we again give this remedy a word of praise. You are welcome to publish this statement for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

Odd Fellows Celebrate.

Quite a number of Odd Fellows from various lodges in Centre County attended the twenty-eighth annual session of the Eastern Pennsylvania I. O. O. F. Anniversary Association which celebrated the ninety-third anniversary of Odd Fellowship in America at Renovo last Friday. With the town brilliantly decorated and hundreds of visitors present, Renovo presented a gala appearance.

At 10.30 o'clock in the morning a business meeting was held and at 2 in the afternoon a parade moved in three divisions, with Lieut. Col. George W. Morton as chief marshal, and H. B. Bressler chief of staff. It was headed by the Fourth Regiment under command of Col. William H. Keiss, accompanied by his staff.

At 4 o'clock an open air meeting was held from the veranda of the Hotel Clinton, with the Rev. J. J. Bettens as chairman; Joseph Reilly, chief burgess, Charles Geevey, of Williamsport, William K. Mohr, of Allentown, W. Oscar Miller, of Reading, and Maj.-Gen. J. B. Andrews, of Altoona, spoke.

At 7:30 o'clock in the evening a special session of the grand lodge, limited to past grands, was held for conferring of grand lodge degree in I. O. O. F. Hall. At 8 o'clock the first degree was conferred by Renovo lodge to a large class of candidates. At the same hour a special session of Rebekah assembly took place in the I. O. O. F. Hall, at which the assembly degree was conferred.

Next year the meeting will be held at Jersey Shore.

List of Grievances Against Men.

In the May American Magazine, Ida M. Tarbell publishes a piece of documentary evidence showing that the organized movement for woman's rights as we have it in this country was founded on the idea that man is a conscious tyrant. Following is a document,—a List of Grievances which was adopted with a Declaration of Sentiments at the first convention called in this country to consider the rights of women:

"The history of mankind is a history of repeated injuries and unsurpations on the part of man toward woman, having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over her.

"He has never permitted her to exercise her inalienable rights to the elective franchise.

"He has compelled her to submit to laws in the formation of which she has had no voice.

"He has withheld from her rights which are given to the most ignorant and degraded men.

"He has made her, if married, in the eye of the law civilly dead.

"He has taken from her all right in property, even to the wages she earns.

"He has so framed the laws of divorce, as to what shall be the proper causes, and in case of separation, to whom the guardianship of the children shall be given, as to be wholly regardless of the happiness of the woman.

"After depriving her of all rights as a married woman, if single, and the owner of property, he has taxed her to support a government which recognizes her only when her property can be made profitable to it.

"He has denied her the facilities for obtaining a thorough education, all colleges being closed against her.

"He has created a false public sentiment by giving to the world a different code of morals for men and women, by which moral delinquencies which exclude women from society are not only tolerated but deemed of little account in man.

"He has usurped the prerogative of Jehovah himself, claiming it as his right to assign for her a sphere of action, when that belongs to her conscience and to her God.

"He has endeavored, in every way that he could, to destroy her confidence in her own powers, to lessen her self-respect, and to make her willing to lead a dependent and abject life."

C. H. Wildmann, 143½ Bedford St., Cumberland, Md., writes: "I have used Foley Kidney Pills and find them all O. K. I had tried other remedies but Foley Kidney Pills are the best medicine I ever used." They are tonic in action and give quick and permanent benefit. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

PRIZE LIFE-SAVING BOAT

Enough of Them Would Have Saved Every Soul on the Titanic.

Among the multitudinous contributions to the public press on the subject of the Titanic disaster by far the most illuminating is the letter in the New York Herald of April 18 from Capt. William S. Sims, U. S. N., so widely known in the naval world on account of his prominence in naval gunnery.

Capt. Sims says that when naval attache at the American embassy in Paris he was selected by the heirs of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Pollock of Washington, who were lost when the French Liner La Bourgogne went down off Newfoundland in July, 1898, to manage a competition in Paris during the exposition of 1900, for the best means of saving life at sea.

The prize was 100,000 frances, or $20,000. More than 3,000 appliances were submitted in competition. The judges, who were the directors of the life-saving services of Great Britain, France, Russia, and other countries, found that none of the large passenger steamships had sufficient boats and none carried regular crews for the life-boats. In many cases there were fewer sailors than there were boats.

The appliance that won the prize consisted of a barge, or flat-boat, about 40 feet wide and as long as the width of the ship carrying it. It was built of steel with water tight compartments. This boat was installed in place of and served as the ship's bridge and was so mounted that two men could get it overboard in about three minutes. A single boat of this kind, the judges decided, would easily support 600 persons.

Also were submitted designs of steel lifeboats safely carrying 60 passengers and virtually unsinkable and slung on davits so they could be lowered in a jiffy. Capt. Sims points out that three or four of such bridge boats with accompanying steel lifeboats would have insured the saving of every soul on board the Titanic.

The reason the big ships are not provided with them, Capt. Sims believes, is that ship owners consider they can attract more passengers by providing luxury than they can by assuring safety. One steamship owner told the naval officer that if his ships installed complete life-saving appliances they would not attract a single passenger.

Perhaps when all is said and done, it may appear that the speed craze of the age which is shown by the death-defying risks taken by automobilists and motor boatmen has a large part in making the public indifferent to danger, an indifference reflected in the ship companies' catering to the love of speed and luxury. —Army and Navy Journal.

GEN. GRANT BURIED

Accorded Full Military Honors at Services Held at West Point.

General Frederick Dent Grent, late commander of the department of the east, was buried with full military honors at West Point last Friday.

The funeral services were held in the chapel at Governors Island in the morning. After the services the mahogany coffin was placed on an artillery caisson and taken to South Ferry, where it was met by a military escort of two troops of cavalry, one batallion of artillery and one regiment of regular infantry, under the command of General Tasker H. Bliss. In addition to this regular army escort, further solemnity was lent to the occasion by troops from the National Guard of New York, the western artillery corps, and U. S. Grant post of the G. A. R.

Starting from South ferry the funeral cortege marched up Broadway to Madison square, North on Fifth avenue to Forty-Second street ferry. Special ferry boats, draped in black transported body and its escort across the Hudson river to Weehawken, where a special train was waiting to take the members of the Grant family and prominent army and government officials to West Point.

At West Point the train was met by a regiment of cadets of the United States Military Academy, who escorted the body to its final resting place.

The general's body rested inside a solid copper case which in turn reposed in a massive mahogany coffin. A solid mahogany outer case covered the coffin, on which was a large solid silver plate engraved in old English script:

FREDERICK DENT GRANT
Major General U. S. A.

April 11, 1912

The services in the chapel at Governors Island were attended by a large throng of friends, including President Taft.

Dr. S. H. Anderson, the widely known specialist of Pittsburg, Pa., 440 Sixth Avenue, has thoroughly tested the action of Foley Kidney Pills and after eight months of the closest investigation, reports: "Foley Kidney Pills are the best I have ever used. They clear away the uric acid and albuminous sediment, allay the spasmodic action of the neck of the bladder, also the tenesmus, and in fact renovate the kidneys. I speak this way knowing the action of Foley Kidney Pills, as I have given them a good test." They cure backache, rheumatism, and all kidney and bladder ailments. Give them a trial. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Early Pasture for Hogs.

As early in the spring as possible prepare a piece of rich ground. When a good seed bed is made, drill in from one to 1½ bushels of barley or early oats per acre; or, better still, a mixture of these. Be sure to use the beardless barley. Then follow with a grass seeder, sowing a mixture of four pounds Dwarf Essex rape, three pounds timothy, and eight pounds clover seeds per acre. I have been using alsike, medium and mammoth clovers, but this spring shall include alfalfa, writes an expert in Farm and Home.

I cover the seed with a weeder, sometimes crossing. A light spike-tooth harrow will answer also. If sown early, and the earlier the better, this light covering will be sufficient, as there is usually plenty of moisture in the ground t this time.

When the rape is about six inches high, which will be in six to eight weeks, hogs may be turned in; the rape, barley and oats should furnish abundant pasture for about 25 shotes per acre. In the meantime timothy and the clovers are growing to supplant the maturing barley and oats, and, with the rape, will furnish a well-balanced ration until covered with snow. This lot will next year furnish the best meadow or pasture on the farm.

Planting the Vegetable Garden.

It is not always advantageous to plant the garden as early as possible. Under certain conditions Nature hastens the growth of late planted seeds so that the difference in time of their ripening will not accord with the difference in plantings. This is particularly the case when the season is late and rainy.

Plant for a succession of the different vegetables. A garden in which most of the planting is done at about the same time will not give as good results as where a period of time elapses between the second, third or fourth plantings of the same vegetables. Particularly is this true of peas, says Farm and Home. Where a number of different varieties were tried the best results were obtained from one or two varieties planted in succession.

In sweet corn, however, this was not so apparent. It was found best to rely on several varieties as well as successive plantings. If the season was backward or the plantings made unusually early, sweet corn seemed to be very slow in growth. On the other hand, the corn planted later would grow very fast under favorable conditions and almost catch up with the first plantings. To overcome this difficulty it was found advisable to rely on the plantings of different varieties.

There are people in this town who unthinkingly neglect a "mere cold" though they would not otherwise expose their children or themselves to danger. Yet a cold neglected may develope into contagious diphtheria, bronchitis, or pneumonia. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly for it stops coughs quickly and cures colds. It contains no opiates and is safe for children. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Homes Furnished For 3 Cents a Day

A million homes have been furnished by us for as low as 3 cents per day.

The cost was at least one-third less than the same things cost in stores. The goods were sent on approval. The bills were paid a little each month—by saving a few cents daily.

A million men, on incomes of $10 to $16 per week, have thus furnished beautiful homes. And some of those homes are close by you.

New-Style Credit

Our credit plan is new, pleasant, convenient. It is simply an open account. No interest, no security, no red tape or publicity. No extra price.

We send goods on one month's approval. You have a month to decide before buying. The goods you keep are charged to your account. You pay as convenient—a little each month. On the average, our customers take a year to pay.

Save 30 to 50 Per Cent

We save you in addition from 30 to 50 per cent. That is proved by actual comparison made in 20 big cities between local store prices and ours.

This saving is due to our immense buying power, and to dealing with you direct.

30 Days' Trial

You can be sure of this saving, and of everything else, because our goods are all sent on approval. You can use them a month before deciding to buy. If you want to return them for any reason we pay the freight both ways.

State Big Poultry Buyer.

Pennsylvania has been the biggest buyer of pure bred poultry of any State in the Union and has also imported more fowls of pedigree and egg-laying possibilities than any other, declares W. Theo. Wittman, of Allentown, an acknowledged expert on poultry in a bulletin issued by the State Department of Agriculture on poultry. Mr. Wittman, whose work as a judge at fairs is known all over the State and who is one of the lecturers of the State's farmers' institute, wrote the bulletin with the idea of inculcating some ideas about increasing the winter yield of eggs; but states some interesting matter about poultry in this State.

"The farmers of our great State, in common with those of many other States, have not, as a rule, begun to give anything like the thoughtful and intelligent attention to poultry keeping and large egg production that they could have done or eventually are bound to give. As our civilization becomes more complex and our population denser, it is certain that the demand for and the use of the finer and more nutritious foods, like poultry and eggs, will continue to immensely increase. The already great increase in their consumption has produced a startling increase in prices, stimulating within the last year or two, an enormous increase in interest, oddly enough, beginning with the largest consumer of poultry products, the town and city people. This class has, within the period of time mentioned, spent more or less unwisely hundreds of thousands of dollars in the buying of schemes for city poultry keeping promising enormous profits."

Later on Mr. Wittman in discussing the business of raising chickens says:

"And while Pennsylvania, with its many farms, already ranks as a great poultry State, it is a most gratifying and encouraging sign of the likelihood that its poultry product may be shortly greatly increased or that as a State it may some time lead, by the fact that lately it has been the biggest buyer and importer of pure bred poultry of any State in the Union.

To Plant a Tree Properly.

Prof. H. A. Surface, Pennsylvania State Zoologist, of Harrisburg, has received appeals for directions for planting trees so they will grow. As he has planted over 20,000 trees, of which no more than one per cent. failed to live and thrive, the instructions by our State Zoologist are decidedly timely, and will be found practical and useful for many persons. They are as follows:

To grow a good tree certain essential points should be observed. Among these are the following:

First. It should be a healthy, vigorous tree. As surely as a tree is sickly, enfeebled, infected with disease germs, or infected with insects at the time it is transplanted, this condition will be unfavorable to its growth, and it can not be expected that it will develop into a good tree without the removal of the pests assailing it.

Second. It should be a young tree rather than an old tree. A one-year-old tree five feet tall will be much more sure to grow than a tree three or four years old of the same height. Also, a young tree is more easily transplanted with less shock to its system from the operation, and with less proportionate loss of roots than in an old tree.

Third. The roots should be cut back to some extent, but the length and size of those remaining should be proportionate to the size of the tree. For a one-year old tree the roots should be six or eight inches in length, and if possible should extend in different directions. A deep root is not necessary for the growth or life of the tree, and in many cases can be cut off, thus saving the labor of digging a deep hole. Very fine hairy roots, which keep the earth from pressing close around the other roots, should be removed.

Fourth. The top should be cut back in proportion to the cutting back of the roots. This should be more severely than most persons believe. In most cases the tree will thrive better if its branches are cut back to very short spurs, and from two-thirds to three-fourths o its top cut off, than though the entire top should be permitted to remain at the time of transplanting.

Fifth. All broken and decayed or diseased parts should be cut away both in root and top, and if the top is unsymmetrical in its shape, it should be cut back to a fair degree of symmetry at this time if ever.

Sixth. The hole should be dug of such depth that when the tree is planted and tramped firmly in position it will not stand more than three inches deeper in the soil than it previously grew.

Seventh. If the tree is to be planted in a plowed or cultivated place the preparation should be very thorough, by deep plowing, about such as is a clay subsoil or other impervious substrata it should be removed by digging to a depth of one or two feet more, and a good fertile top earth thrown in its place and firmly tramped into position when not wet enough to cake.

If the tree is to be planted in soil that is not cultivated, the earth should be loosened deeply over the spot about five or six feet in diameter. From the middle of this spot the subsoil should be removed, and replaced with good earth to such depth as will let the roots stand at the desired elevation.

Eighth. It is not enough in hard ground or sod merely to dig a small hole large enough to hold the roots of the tree. In such a case the soil around it becomes too dry, and the tree fails to thrive. The proper preparation of a good, broad, deep root bed is important in places where the ground is uncultivated, as along streets, in lawns, school yards, etc. In replacing the subsoil that was removed, use good top earth that is about the right moisture to be correct for planting seed, but not wet enough to pack into a cake when tramped. Then tramp it firmly in the hole before setting the tree upon it.

Ninth. Set the tree in position on fertile earth that is damp but not wet. Spread the roots in different directions, but have none looping around in the hole. Either dig the hole larger, or cut off the long roots.

Tenth. Put over the roots about two inches of good, loose, fertile soil, and tramp it firmly to position. Firm this ground closely about all roots, and be sure that no space is left beneath the centre. If there are roots at different elevations gradually fill in the earth until each is covered and firmly separated, rather than crowd them all down and packing them in together at one time.

Next throw about one inch of loose earth over that which has been firmed, and over this scatter some well decayed manure or a few spoonfuls of commercial fertilizer or plant food of any kind.

Carefully avoid placing artificial plant food or manure in contact with the roots.

Eleventh. Fill the hole with earth loosely to within an inch or two of the surface of the ground. Do not tramp it.

Over this loose ground can be a mulch like straw held in place by boards, sticks, etc., or cultivate the top of the soil by shallow cultivation as soon as it is dry enough to do this properly after each rain. Do not use water in planting a tree unless the soil is dry, in which event it can be well soaked by pouring on several buckets of water after the roots are entirely covered. The tree should not be shaken after watering.

Charles Wright, 1512 French St., Wilmington, Del., recovered from a severe attack of rheumatism caused by rheumatism and says: "The rheumatic pains kept me awake at night but after taking Foley Kidney Pills the pain lessened and soon I was able to sleep all night, and I am cured of all kidney trouble." The Acrobatic Gibbon.

A great ape which makes its home in Borneo is the gibbon, which is a small animal compared with the orang, weighing only about forty or fifty pounds. It is very frail in its bodily makeup. The head is set squarely on the shoulders, and it looks upward. When walking on the ground it balances itself along like a walker on a tight rope. Its remarkable power of grasp and dexterity in using its hands are equally with the shape of its cranium indexes of its superior intelligence, perhaps because it is able to take hold of a greater number of things and examine them. The gibbons go in droves, whereas orangs live by families, and one of the most interesting spectacles imaginable is to see a troop of them crossing a great gap in the forest by throwing themselves in succession through the air, each one taking a swing or two to gather momentum before launching himself. So great is their agility that in executing feats of this sort they seem like birds.

Voltaire's Retort.

That famous politician, orator and man of fashion the fourth Earl of Chesterfield was on one occasion at a grand assembly in France, where Voltaire was one of the guests. Suddenly the French writer accosted his lordship with the words:

"My lord, I know you are a judge. Which are the more beautiful, the English or the French ladies?"

"Upon my word," replied Chesterfield, with his usual presence of mind, "I am no judge of paintings."

Some time afterward, says a biographer, Voltaire, being in London, happened to be at a nobleman's party with Chesterfield. A lady in the company prodigiously rouged directed her whole discourse to Voltaire and engrossed his conversation. Chesterfield came up, tapped him on the arm and said:

"Sir, take care that you are not captivated."

"My lord," promptly replied the French wit, "I scorn to be taken by an English craft under French colors."

A Costly Bed.

At Knole park, Sevenoaks, England, in the king's bedroom is one of the most extravagant bedsteads ever made. It was prepared by Richard, third Earl of Dorset, for the reception of James I. It is twelve feet high by seven feet six inches long. The curtains, valances, tester and lower valances are composed of cloth of gold and, together with the ceiling, are lined with brilliant coral taffetas, now much faded, all closely embroidered in a floral design in gold, silver and colored silks. The pillows and quilt are of the same embroidered coral silk and trimmed with many rows of most elaborate fringe made of gold, silver, coral silk and black tassels. A London Times writer says that the cost of this astounding extravagance amounted to £8,000, which represents at least £40,000 of present currency.

The Snow Leopard of India.

India has produced some of the finest big game hunters in the world. First they kill deer, then tigers, and after that they climb into the hills after the mountain sheep, which are the most difficult of all their kind to follow and kill. But there is one ambition beyond the mountain sheep. That is the snow leopard. This beautiful creature, white as the snows it lives among, is rarely found below a height of 11,000 feet and is even there extremely rare. It is both wild and savage, and the natives have a superstitious fear of its white coat and deep green eyes. The man who succeeds in killing a snow leopard steps into the very first rank of big game hunters.

A Lover of the Wind.

Tennyson had an extraordinary sympathy with the sound of the breeze. As a child of four years old he was blown along the garden path at Somersby, shouting to his brothers his first line of Tennysonian blank verse—

I hear a voice that's calling in the wind.

So, writes Arthur Waugh, the mother in "Rizpah" hears Willy's voice in the wind, and so, again and again, in his poetry does he endow the storm with the invisible voice of nature. And it is so that he is best remembered in Freshwater, battling the wind upon the wintry ridge with his poet's cloak fluttering about him.

Turkish Medicine.

Old fashioned Turkish physicians have plenty of remedies for cholera. An agate in the pocket and a hyacinth on the neck are much esteemed, but the bone of a dead child carried in the pocket is nearly as efficacious. Cholera, we learn, is caused by the moon. Therefore a sufferer should drink decoctions of laurel while Mars or Mercury is in the ascendant, since these planets are unfriendly to the moon.

Burning Celluloid.

Burning celluloid is one of the most difficult and dangerous kinds of fire to extinguish. An investigation by Dr. Panzer of Vienna has shown that, while the substance does not ignite spontaneously, decomposition continues after the flames of a piece of burning celluloid are extinguished and does not cease even when the material is plunged into a vessel of carbonic acid or steam. Oxygen from the air not being necessary for decomposition, water and ordinary chemical extinguishers have little effect on celluloid fires. Decomposition takes place at temperatures between 220 degrees and 365 degrees F., and may be started by an open flame or even a hot stove. When slowly heated the celluloid first softens, then blisters and finally decomposes suddenly, sometimes bursting into flame. The products are gases, liquids and carbon. The white fumes from combustion form an explosive mixture with air, and the colorless gases contain poisonous carbon monoxide and nitrogen oxides. As these gases, explosive and irrespirable, are intensely hot, moreover, it is almost impossible for firemen to get near a celluloid blaze in a building.

A Correct Answer.

Senator Bailey once was chairman of a committee to examine candidates for admission to the bar in Dallas county, Tex. In the case of one candidate Mr. Bailey reported to the judge presiding that in his opinion the aspirant for legal honors had not duly qualified, having answered correctly but one of the questions put to him.

"Only one question?" asked the judge. "Well, what was that one?"

"I asked him what a freehold estate is," replied Bailey.

"An important question," commented the judge. "And what was his reply?"

"He made it without the least hesitation," observed Bailey with a slight smile. "The fact is, of course, in his favor."

"Well, what did he say?" demanded the judge impatiently.

"He said," responded the chairman, "that he didn't know."—New York World.

The Lesson Came Home to Him.

Two men, one a stranger in New York, stopped at an uptown newsstand to buy papers. The attendant was not in sight, and the New Yorker, placing the coppers on the stand, turned to his companion and said, with a show of civic pride, "That's the way we do here." Just then the newsboy appeared, and the New Yorker, probably intent on driving the lesson home, asked, "Do you ever lose anything by people taking papers?" "Sure I do," was the prompt reply. "But I know the fellers what forget." "Well, what do you do about it?" "When I git a chance I ask 'm to pay." "How do you get the chance?" "Well," he said, smiling broadly, "here's a time. You owe me for two papers; got 'em last Thursday w'en I was holdin' down the stand on the other side." The man remembered and paid.—New York Tribune.

Guarding His Job.

Old Sam had been seen for several days patiently sitting on the bank of the Rappahannock river, near the dam, holding his shotgun in his hand.

Finally he attracted the attention of a passerby, who asked:

"Well, Uncle Sam, are you looking for something to do?"

"No, suh," answered Sam; "I's gittin' paid fo' what I's doin'."

"Indeed," said the other. "And what may that be?"

"Shootin' de muskrats dat am undermininʼ de dam," answered Sam.

"Why, there goes one now!" exclaimed the stranger excitedly. "Why don't you shoot?"

"S'pose I wants to lose mah job, suh?" answered Sam complacently.—Saturday Evening Post.

Bananas.

Bananas, if they are unripe, may be used with advantage as a vegetable. Cut the fruit in halves, stew them for twenty-five minutes in just a little water, drain, cover them with a cream sauce such as you use for cauliflower and serve them hot. The ripe fruit is a delicious garnish to meat. Cut round slices from ripe, firm bananas, fry them in butter and lay a few on the top and round a broiled steak as it goes to table.

On the East coast of Florida in Palm Beach County, is the most beautiful spot on earth, and is as healthful as it is beautiful—That's Palm Beach.

Just this side is Palm City Farms, the most fertile soil in Florida, consisting of a rich dark loamy soil, underlaid with marl and clay, and in the Banner County, in producing a larger yield, per acre, by 30%, than any other County in the State, and gives larger returns, per acre than the States o. Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Ohio combined. The yield is $600 per acre, in three months after planting eggplants, tomatoes or peppers, and $200 per acre from potatoes in 100 days following the above mentioned crops, on same ground. You don't have to peddle, vegetable agents come to you to buy. Ten acres yield $8000 if properly cultivated, in six months.

Health is a subject that is foremost with every human being. Palm City Farms is the Mecca! All that makes life one sweet dream is there. The conditions conducive to disease are absent—no extreme heat or cold. Balmy breezes from the West bring odors of resinous pines. Prevailing South-East winds bring the soft fresh air over the land, giving life and vigor, as your cheeks feel the gentle glow of a radiant sunshine all the year round. If you want a farm or home like that, it is yours for $50.00 per acre, $10.00 per month, no interest, no taxes, and a free town lot in Palm City, on an elevation overlooking and commanding a magnificent view of the beautiful St. Lucie river, a deep salt water stream, half a mile wide, abounding in fish of great variety. Why stay North, work like a slave and freeze half the year, when you can have perpetual Spring in a Palm City Farms home.

Admission to West Point.

A candidate for the Military academy at West Point must first get the indorsement of the senator or congressman from his district. The question of appointment is generally settled in each district by competitive examination, the representative in congress appointing the boy who obtains the highest marks. Once the candidate has passed this competitive examination and received the appointment to the academy he must pass both a mental and physical examination at the hands of the army officers assigned to duty at the West Point institution. All appointees must be between seventeen and twenty-two years old, free from any infirmity which might render them unfit for military service and be able to pass an examination in English grammar, English composition, English literature, algebra through quadratic equations, plane geometry, descriptive geography and the elements of physical geography, United States history and the outlines of general history.

Spoiled His Appetite.

Baron Graham once asked an epicure how many oysters he should eat in order to create a good appetite for dinner and was told to eat away until he became hungry. The baron, who never saw a joke, ate ten dozen and then plaintively remarked, "'Pon my word, I don't think I am as hungry as when I began."

"I had been given up to die by three of our best doctors,

I could not stand it to be on my feet and I was so swelled in the abdomen I could hardly breathe.

But thanks to Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine I am able to be about the streets, a walking advertisement of the curative qualities of your remedies, although I am 70 years old."

How Late Can we Prune?

This is a practical question asked at this time of year by many persons. State Zoologist Surface from his office at Harrisburg has issued the following statement:

"Pruning can be done at any time of year, but the larger branches should be cut off when they are dormant or nearly so. If I had trees that really needed pruning, I should do this even after the time of full blossoming, but should prefer to do it before the blossoms open, and even before the growth has started much. The large stubs should be painted with tar paint or oil paint. Be careful about burning brush near the trees as they are easily damaged by heat."

GORDON OR PALMER?

When the Democratic State convention assembles at Harrisburg on Wednesday of next week there will be a pretty showdown between the contending factions, the regulars and the reorganizers. In advance of the convention each faction is claiming to be in control.

With control of the convention there will probably go the honor of election to the Democratic National Committee. The reorganizers are concentrating their strength behind Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer. The regulars who for years followed Guffey will put up Ex-Judge James Gay Gordon, of Philadelphia, as their choice. Gordon is a shrewd, experienced politician and strategist. For years he openly opposed Guffey. Between the two men there was nothing in common, not even a trace of personal friendship. When Gordon saw that Guffey, by reason of financial reverses, was losing his grip on the Democratic machine, he swung into line as a regular. Experienced observers at once detected that his reason was to fortify himself with the label of regularity and pave the way to stepping into Guffey's shoes when the Pittsburg man should retire, either voluntarily or otherwise. Now Guffey has effaced himself and Gordon is to the front as the candidate of the regulars for national committeeman. Palmer is relying on the sentiment for reorganization of the party to carry him into the National Committee.

The popularity of one candidate for President as against some other candidate will not enter into the battle between Gordon and Palmer. Virtually all the national delegates are favorable to Governor Wilson. Gordon and Palmer are built on lines which are diametrically opposite. Gordon possesses all the cunning, adroitness and smoothness of a clever politician. He masks his innermost thoughts behind features that betray nothing and least of all reveal his feelings. He is a pastmaster in playing the game of politics on a political checkerboard. If the battle for national committeeman hinges solely, or even largely, upon the skill and resourcefulness of the one man as matched against the other, Gordon will win. If Palmer has behind him anything like the powerful sentiment his friends say he will have he will no doubt be the victor, for many years of schooling in the field of practical politics as a one-time lieutenant in the Guffey machine have qualified him to take care of himself in almost any kind of an emergency.

To the disinterested observer the ruggle between these two would-be political captains will be decidedly entertaining and certainly well worth watching. There may not be a whole lot of reform, or desire for reform, mixed up in the clash of steel against steel, but there will be a collision that gives promise of making more fur fly than has been witnessed in many a day.

Vance McCormick, one of the State bosses of the reorganization faction of Democrats, was recently elected a delegate to the Democratic State convention, which convenes May 7. All of which was loudly heralded and pointed to with great pride by the anti-Guffey newspapers, which pretend to abhor the use of money in politics. Along comes Mr. McCormick in a sworn statement in which he admits that he spent exactly $1,090.35 to be elected a State delegate. While not in any way mixing in the Democratic family quarrel, we cannot refrain from asking what in the world did Mr. McCormick do with the money?

Mrs. Charles Guisewhite Dead.

Mrs. Charles Guisewhite died at her late home in Bellefonte on Sunday last, her death being due to asthma. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. W. Winey, pastor of the United Brethren church. Interment was made in the Union cemetery. Deceased was aged 37 years, 5 months and 13 days. Surviving are a husband, two daughters, Margaret and Marie, and an infant child about one week old.

"UNTIL DEATH DO US PART."

Survivors of the ill-fated Titanic have related many tales of pathetic scenes on the ship as it went down to its watery grave, but above all others stands one relating the true devotion between the venerable Isidor Straus and his wife who were returning home after a brief period abroad. The trip across the ocean had been taken just as the two had traveled through life's journey—together. Deeply devoted to each other they were enjoying the closing years of their lives as true companions and helpmates.

Survivors relate that when it was found the ship was sinking Mr. Straus kissed his wife goodbye and was about to hand her into a lifeboat when she turned back and placing her arms about his neck said: "After all these years together I will not leave you." There they stood on the deck of the doomed steamer as it went down. Locked in each other's arms they met death as they had met all the battles of life—together.

"After all these years together I will not leave you." It was many, many years ago that Isidor Straus led his bride to the altar, but time eventually bore eloquent witness to the depth of meaning of her youthful vow: "Until Death do us part."

There is a lesson to all men in the devotion of this aged woman to her husband which was so deep and binding that she willingly gave up life to remain with him. The lesson is that all through life Isidor Straus was a good man, was a true kindly, loyal husband. He not only won but retained the devotion and affection of a good woman and when she was called upon to choose between him and life she spurned the latter and enfolded within his arms she died. "After all these years" life without him meant nothing to her. Life with him had meant everything to her, and it was so because he was everything a manly man should be.

Berry Again Looms Up.

William H. Berry, former State Treasurer and late candidate for Governor on the Keystone ticket, is said by friends to be willing to take the nomination for treasurer again at the hands of the Democratic State convention when it meets in Harrisburg on May 7. The former Treasurer, who has been wooed by both "regulars" and "reorganizers" in the war for control of the party machinery the last year, has, like William Jennings Bryan, declined to get mixed up with either side, but has urged that harmony should be brought about.

The suggestion of the name of Berry by Walter R. Ritter, chief of the "regulars," is believed to have more back of it than personal preference. Berry is said to see a chance to get into office again through possible division among the Republicans, as he did in 1905. Just what the former treasurer who has been known to have astonishing visions really does see no one knows, but his friends have been very active in talking him up and more of the "regulars" will follow the lead of Ritter in advocating him as a "personal" choice.

Ritter has caused considerable disgust among the "reorganizers" by his mention of Berry. The "reorganizers" have been busy framing up their slate for national delegates-at-large and greasing the ways for the election of Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer as national committeeman and the re-election of George W. Guthrie as their State Chairman and wanted to use the nominations in the convention for business purposes. If the "regulars" come out for Berry, it will make the friends of the Chesterman, who include Keystone Democrats, feel rather kindly and at the same time get support of many Bryan men who know how kindly the Nebraskan feels toward the former treasurer. There seems to be little doubt but that the "reorganizers" were going to use Berry for their own if they needed him, but Ritter has rather disturbed their scheme by beating them to it.

On last Friday, at 12.15 o'clock, a baby girl was born at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stere. On Saturday afternoon the mother was seized with convulsions Drs. W. U. Irwin and J. L. Seibert were summoned and all efforts were made to save her, but she passed away at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. Mrs. Bessie Stere was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Miles, of Martha, who preceded her to the grave a number of years ago. She leaves to mourn her death a husband, three children, Marion, aged 6; James Blair, aged 4, and Bessie, the infant child; also two brothers, Edward Miles, of Portage, Pa., and Roy Miles, of Pitcairn. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Allison McKinney, of Port Matilda. She was aged 29 year, 8 months and 22 days. The funeral services were held from the late home and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Zeigler, Rev. Mr. Kelly and Rev. V. L. Wagner. Interment in the Unionville cemetery.

Mrs. Stere leaves, besides those already mentioned, these members of her husband's family: J. C. Stere and wife and father and mother, J. B. Stere and wife and brother, all of Unionville; and Rev. V. L. Wagner and wife, a sister, of Buckhorn, Pa.

Bessie was loved by us all, and we shall miss our sister, and shall ever cherish a loving memory of one who tried to make life bright and cheery for us all. She was a faithful wife, a loving and tender mother, and a kind and affectionate sister. But she has gone from among us. God has called her to try the realities of an unseen world. Our loss is Heaven's gain.

She has been a patient sufferer in times of illness, always bright and cheerful even amidst the most trying circumstances. She brought comfort to us in times of sickness, sacrificing many times her own comfort for the good she might do to others. She became the mother of six children, three of whom died in infancy. How patiently she suffered the loss of her children, never complaining but always willing to be submissive to God's will.

Bessie was kind hearted and loving to all she knew and she shall be missed by all. May the dear Lord help us to cherish the memory of her kind and loving deeds she wrought in our midst.

No time for a last farewell,
No time for the shock of fear,
Scarcely a moment's halt on the shore,
With the guide and the boatman near—
Dear Bessie, how surprised you were to go,
With little to suffer, little to know.
Only a moment of dark,
A dream of the fleeting night,
And then the beautiful break of day
And the quiet peace of light,
And you found yourself where you longed to stand,
In the repose of God's heavenly land.

The Story of a Duel.

In his "Dueling Stories of the Sixteenth Century" Brantome, a French writer, says that two French captains, though old friends, fell out and fought. One of them was disabled. "The other, being untouched, observed: 'There, that's enough for old friends like us. You'd better go and attend to your wounds.' To this the vanquished one replied: 'Well, you might as well do a bit more for me. Just pretend to be wounded and wear your arm in a sling for a day or two, so that I needn't be considered disgraced nor any question of that come up when they want to reconcile us—that is, if I survive.' And the victorious friend smeared some of the other's blood on his arm and went about saying that he was wounded, but it was a mere nothing, and he only wished his friend were the same. The latter recovered with some difficulty, and they were afterward as good friends as before."

English Prison Pits.

Prison pits were vaults in which criminals in England were kept at night, chained together. There was one at Bristol which was in use as late as 1815. Down eighteen steps, it was only seventeen feet in diameter by nine feet high, and seventeen men were consigned to it every night. Even more typical was Warwick jail pit, which was occupied at least until 1797. It was an octagonal dungeon twenty-one feet in diameter and almost nineteen feet underground. In the middle was a cesspool, and beside it ran a stream of water which served the prisoners for drinking purposes. To this awful cell forty-two men were consigned every afternoon at 3:45, to remain there until after daylight the following morning. The inmates had to sleep on their sides, and their jailer never visited them without guarding himself with an antidote against sickness.

Miss Elizabeth Kimport Dead.

After an illness dating back several years, and which was due to advanced years, Miss Elizabeth, better known as "Aunt Lizzie" Kimport, quietly passed away on Sunday morning at 4 o'clock. She was one of the oldest residents in the vicinity of Boalsburg and was an aunt of Ex-Prothonotary Arthur B. Kimport. Several months ago she fell down a stairway and sustained a fractured arm and rather painful bruises about the body. It was believed that this accident did much to hasten her death. She was conscious to the end and realizing that her death was not far off she made all arrangements for her funeral, selecting the 61st Psalm and the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." Her death occurred where she was born October 7, 1835, and where she spent her entire life on the well known Kimport farm on the south side. Her parents were John and Elizabeth Kimport, early settlers who had much to do in making Penns valley history. She was one of eight children, and with her death an only brother, James, survives. Since the death of her parents many years ago she had charge of the old Kimport home. She was a good, christian woman, and many a traveller through that section will testify to her generosity and the open-hearted hospitality of her home. In her youth she became a member of the Spruce town Methodist Episcopal church and remained steadfast in its teachings until the end. Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Lantz, of Centre Hall, officiating and paying a glowing tribute to her memory. Many persons were present. Interment was made in the Spruce town church yard cemetery.

For some years Howard has been without a public hall and the objection on the part of the churches to giving their houses of worship for any other than religious or educational purposes calls our attention to the need of a public hall of some kind. There are many entertainments which are innocent in the way of amusement or diversion but are not "to the glory of the Lord," and therefore the objection to holding them in a building dedicated to the Lord. Here is a chance for some of our real estate men to do a little figuring and see if such a hall as is needed here could be erected and put on a paying basis. It has been suggested that for entertainment purposes the hall should be on the first floor and then the second floor could be utilized for flats.

Wm. E. Confer, mail carrier, on R. D. route No. 1, figured in a runaway accident on Saturday that might have cost him his life. Mr. Confer was on his way over the divide from Marsh Creek and just over the summit where the road goes down Canoe hollow, when his horse which is averse to holding back, started at full speed toward the foot of the long hill. In making a turn in the road the buggy was overturned and Mr. Confer was thrown down a steep embankment against a tree and badly bruised and shaken up. Being unable to regain his feet or assist himself in any way he called for help and fortunately Dr. O. W. McEntire came along the same road a few minutes later, gave him medical attention and brought him to his home in town. The outfit was badly broken up and the mail matter promiscuously scattered about. The latter was gathered up without any damage.

A Second Courtship

There Were Some Differences Between It and the First.

By HENRY WILLIAMSON

They met in the sweet summer time, when the days were long, and since neither of them had anything to do they filled the time with making love. But long as the days were they were not long enough for their lovemaking. At least the hours between their waking and going to sleep seemed inadequate to the purpose.

The most fervent lovemaking is usually between those who have no right to love or cannot afford to love. These two belonged to the latter class. He was not yet of age, would have no fortune when he came of age and thus far had made no move to secure even a competence.

But Rogers was full of pluck and enthusiasm and felt that for her he could make several fortunes. He received an offer of a position on the Pacific coast and accepted it. She was to wait for him.

"Goodby," said Rogers. "Remember your promise. You are to wait for me till I am ready to come back for you."

"I will wait for you, but as to your coming back for me that is very uncertain. You are going clear across the continent. You say yourself that you do not deem it safe to marry before you have an assured income besides something laid up. I agree with you. For us who have nothing to marry on and attempt to bring up a family would be an injustice to that family. Better not to be born at all than to struggle among those not equipped to fight the battle of life."

"You are a thoughtful girl."

"Goodby."

Rogers went to California. He was twenty years old, and the girl he expected to wait for him was the same age. He had good pluck, was honorable and would scorn to accept anything he was not entitled to from any one. But he was young, and the young do not usually see justice as it is. At his departure he expected Delia Jenkins to wait for him to gain a competence that was not likely to come to him until she had outgrown the age during which it is best for women to marry.

This she did not propose to do, but she did not tell him so. She was one to act on the principle "Never cross a bridge till you get to it." In a year after his departure he saw the injustice of holding her and released her, though at the same time he declared that if ever he gained what he had gone for he would return to renew his proposal.

Miss Jenkins at the time she received her release had another offer, which she at once accepted. In time she wrote her first love of the change in her anticipation for the future. He wrote back that he would never marry unless she should become a widow and would accept him for her second husband.

Now all this was very sensible and very creditable to both sides. Rogers, though it nearly broke his heart to know that his love passed to another, treated her with every consideration, even to sending a wedding present. She wrote him that, while she was well satisfied with the man she was to marry, if she should become a widow and Rogers wanted her she would give him first preference.

Delia Jenkins became Mrs. Thatcher. Twenty years passed and she became a widow. Rogers had by this time accumulated a competence and was abundantly able to marry. He had never visited the east since his departure for San Francisco and had never seen his former love. Nevertheless at the expiration of the first year of her widowhood he wrote her, renewing the proposition of his youth. She replied that she had been much touched by his constancy and that if he came east she would do everything in her power to contribute to his happiness.

Rogers lost no time in making the journey. On the day of his arrival he sent a note to Mrs. Thatcher asking when it would be convenient for her to receive him. A reply came asking him to call that evening. He did so and, being ushered into the drawing room, which was dimly lighted, saw a woman advancing to meet him.

Now Rogers had exercised his imagination so far as possible as to the probable appearance of his old love after a lapse of two decades. But in spite of himself he saw only the image he remembered and which was the photograph he had taken away with him. Had he seen a woman who had changed as was to have been expected he would have been astonished. As it was, he met with a pleasant surprise. The lady seemed scarcely to have changed at all. The singular part of it all was that he was not conscious of having changed himself. It did not occur to him that should his former love meet him without having been told who he was she would not recognize him.

"Dear me," he exclaimed, "you have scarcely changed at all!"

"Nor you," she said considerately.

"And yet," he went on, holding her hand in his and looking at her fixedly, "you are changed. There is something—I couldn't tell what it is—that is different from the girl I left years ago."

"Have I lost anything of my—my good looks?"

"On the contrary, I think you have gained in comeliness. As to youth, you don't seem to have added half a dozen years to what you were when I left you. You don't look over thirty."

At this the lady cast down her eyes and repressed an expression of dissatisfaction.

Of course a meeting between two lovers one of whom had been married and widowed was not the same as it would have been had they lived in the meanwhile for each other. Rogers saw at once that he could not begin where he had left off. There must be a new courtship—not that he needed one himself; he was ready to take his love right into his arms, as he had done the day he left her, but he had the good sense to realize that it had been far different with the widow. Not only had she lived a long while with her husband and must get used to new conditions, but it is woman's nature to desire a courtship before a marriage.

Indeed, the meeting had all the novelty of a new affair. Whenever Rogers would go back to their past intimacy the widow would say: "You must remember that in my marriage my engagement with you was obliterated. Since then it has had no existence for me, though it may have been continued for you. This is not the same connection. Let us treat it as if we had never met before."

Rogers could not but acknowledge the reasonableness of this. In one way it pained, in another it pleased him. It reminded him that his love had been possessed by another, but there was a freshness in it that could not be expected from the renewal of an affair in middle life with an old flame. His courtship progressed very satisfactorily. He was an exuberant lover and several times came very near spoiling it all by attempting to go too fast. Then, too, there were the usual lovers' spats. Though more mature, Delia was just as sensitive as to the way she was treated as during their previous affair, and Rogers had the same difficulty in bringing her around as before. But while he showed an experience of years in the treatment of women she seemed as wayward as when a girl. This surprised her lover, but he attributed it to the fact that she had the experience of only one man, while he had been thrown in with a great variety of women.

Considering that they had been engaged before, a long courtship was required for Rogers to win the second time. Indeed, several times he was tempted to give up the struggle. Finally, thinking it would be well to assume a more independent attitude, he said:

"I left my affairs in California in other hands temporarily to come here and renew a proposal which I made years ago and which was rendered null through no fault of mine. I did not count on winning you again, and I did not count on your having, in the meanwhile, given your heart to another. That connection, I see, has broken the spell between us so far as you are concerned, and I question if it will ever be restored. I am obliged to return to my affairs. Since you have changed and cannot return to what you were in your feelings toward me I see no way but for me to leave you as I did before, only this time forever."

This had the desired effect. The lady asked for another day to make up her mind, and it was granted. Rogers asked if he could not call for it that evening, but was told that she would be engaged examining her heart. He went away, thinking that he had a rival in the dead, but felt assured that as a living being he had every advantage and the victory would be his. And he was right. When he called again the lady, without speaking a word, held out her arms to him. He drew her to him and had won.

During this courtship Rogers was informed that Delia's mother, whom he remembered well, had grown feeble and kept to her room. He asked to pay his respects to her, but was told that she could not be induced to see even him. As soon as the affair between him and her daughter had come to a crisis he was informed that the mother desired to offer her congratulations, and he was invited to her boudoir.

He saw a woman much changed in appearance from her he had known twenty years before from having been long ill. She extended her hand with a smile that reminded him of Delia when she was a girl, but which, as it was then, he had not noticed in her since his return. That smile sent a thrill through him such as her daughter had not occasioned.

"I wrote you," said the older lady, "that if you would come here I would do everything in my power to contribute to your happiness."

"You wrote me?"

"Yes, I. I am your former Delia; this, my daughter, is your present one. In throwing you with her I have done the only thing in my power for you. I am not only past middle age, but I am broken down by ill health. You are a vigorous man, in the prime of life. I can do nothing more than give you my daughter."

Though the woman's beauty was gone, a pang shot through her former lover. Had he not stood between the two women he would have chosen her in preference to her daughter. But her forethought of old came up to him and told him that she was right. He bowed his head and said nothing. Then, turning to look at the younger of his two loves, he saw an expression on her face that warned him against a blunder. Taking the hand of the mother, he kissed it. Then, turning to the daughter, he took her in his arms and kissed her on the lips.

Sir Thomas More's Head.

When the wise and witty Sir Thomas More was beheaded his head was stuck on a pole on London bridge, where it was exposed for fourteen days, much to the grief of his daughter, Margaret Roper, who resolved to secure it. "One day," says Aubrey, "as she was passing under the bridge, looking at her father's head, she exclaimed: 'That head has lain many a time in my lap. Would to God it would fall into my lap as I pass under!' She had her wish, and it did fall into her lap."

Probably she had bribed one of the keepers of the bridge to throw it over just as the boat approached, and the exclamation was intended to avert the suspicion of the boatmen. At all events, she got possession of it and preserved it with great care in a leaden casket until her death, and it is now inclosed in a niche in the wall of her tomb in St. Dunstan's church, Canterbury.—London Notes and Queries.

The Canny Grocer.

The canny grocer sized up his customer.

She had ordered six strictly fresh eggs.

He took down the paper bag and, going to the basket, picked them out.

Twisting the top of the bag together, he handed it to the woman, who paid him and went away.

The canny grocer smiled.

He had given the women seven eggs when she ordered but six.

He knew that when she reached home and found she had seven instead of six eggs she would be so delighted with the supposition that she had overreached him that she would entirely disregard the fact that six of the eggs were storage and one was dubious.

For the grocer understood human nature.

And he was canny.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Deep Grief.

Throughout his career as a newspaper reporter the young man's assignments had taken him into demonstrative crowds whose periods of noisy demonstration it was his duty to time. "Mr. A. finally appearing, the audience cheered for fifteen minutes." "Senator X. finished his second joke amid laughter that lasted for ten minutes," or "At the close of the speech the audience applauded wildly for thirteen minutes."

These and similar records of the public pulse plentifully adorned nearly every story the young man wrote. One day he was sent to attend the funeral of a rich and crusty tempered old gentleman whose young wife had notoriously repented her choice. The man wound up his story of the funeral thus:

"In the silence that ensued the widow wept for sixteen seconds."—Washington Star.

Discovery of Speed of Light.

One of the greatest discoveries of science is due to observation of the eclipses of Jupiter's moons. It was found that when the earth was in the part of its orbit nearest to Jupiter these eclipses occurred sixteen minutes earlier than when it was in the farthermost part, whereas by all rules of astronomy they should have occurred at the same minute each time. It was deduced from this that the light was not instantaneous and consequently took sixteen minutes to traverse the diameter of the earth's orbit, a distance of about 200,000,000 miles, thus giving to light a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, which was accurately shown later by other experiments.—Chicago Tribune.

The Points of Our Stars.

The stars on our flag and those on the great seal of the United States, as well as those on the seal of the president, are five pointed. The seal of the house of representatives, however, shows six pointed stars, and there are six pointed stars on the obverse of the half and quarter dollar coins, with five pointed stars on the reverse. The reverse of these coins is a copy of the great seal, with the clouds and the stars omitted. So far as can be ascertained the six pointed star is derived from the colonial coins, which were designed in the manner of English heraldry, which sanctions that star. The stars on the flag are copied from the Washington coat of arms.—Harper's.

Identifying a Street.

A gentleman from the rural districts boarded an Olive street car one day last week and directed the conductor to let him off at Pimple avenue. "There is no Pimple avenue in St Louis," protested the conductor. An argument ensued. The conductor brought forth his street directory and after examining it carefully said, "I guess it's Boyle avenue you want."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He Was Soured.

"Have you 'Love Letters of Wise Men?'" she asked timidly.

"No, miss," responded the clerk in the book department.

"And why not?"

"Because wise men never write love letters."—London Telegraph.

He Meant Well.

Magistrate—What sort of a man was it that you saw commit the assault? Witness—He was a small, insignificant creature, your honor, just about your size.—St. Louis Republic.

"Your wife seems to be very angry."

"Yes."

"What's the trouble?"

"I didn't inquire. That only makes words."—Detroit Free Press.

A noble nature can alone attract the noble and alone knows how to retain them.—Goethe.

Kind Neighbors.

When Miss Jenkins, after spending fifty-six years in the city of her birth, decided to buy a small farm in the country she determined to miss none of the delights of farming life.

"I'm going to have a steady horse and two cows and some hens," she announced to her brother, to whom she proudly displayed her new property. "The Adams boy from the next house will help me about everything. He'll drive the cows and milk and teach me how to harness, and of course I shall feed the hens and the little pig."

"The little pig!" echoed her brother. "Do you propose to keep a pig? And where, I should like to know?"

"There's room for a small pigpen back of the barn, away from the road and everything," said Miss Jenkins calmly. "Mr. Adams has some cunning little pigs, and that is what I wish. And I asked the Adams boy if he thought when the pig had outgrown the pen I could find some one to take him and give me another little one in exchange, and he seemed sure I could. You've no idea, brother, how obliging the people are here in the country."

Faith In Medicine.

That the negro loves to be considered in ill health and thus attract attention to himself is well known to those who live in the south and are well acquainted with the race. By a certain consequence of this they will all take medicine whenever opportunity offers. Once a young man had been ill for some weeks, and his negro servant was cleaning up the room one morning. Noticing several bottles of medicine only partly used, which were put aside to be thrown away, the negro remarked:

"Mr. Willie, gimme dat medicine. I ain't—er—been feelin' well er bit lately."

"What is the matter?" he was asked.

"I don't know whut de matter is, but if de medicine is any ercount hit will go sarchin' in me an' fine out."—Los Angeles Times.

The All Sufficient Farm.

The charm of farm life is its ability to take care of itself. I have always urged that before trying to make money by our crops we country folk should reduce outgoes. I remember that seventy-five years ago my father's family lived well, but spent in actual cash rarely more than $100 a year. We raised our own lamb, veal, fowls, eggs, beef, vegetables, apples and pears and cherries and plums, and with all this very nearly all our sugar as well as our honey. Little of this was sold except eggs and fruit, but much of it was exchanged or "swapped." Then we made our own clothes, largely from our own wool, our carpets and our bedding and our pillows, with all the rest. We made and mended our own shoes, and our tools were largely homemade.—Outing Magazine.

Only One Statue of Dickens.

West Philadelphia holds the only statue of Charles Dickens in the world, says the Philadelphia Press. Hardly ever is a passing glance given by hurrying pedestrians to this monument of bronze and granite, depicting the great writer seated and looking lovingly down upon the upturned head of Little Nell, the child of his brain. The monument is a bronze group by E. Edwin Elwell, the famous sculptor, and was purchased several years ago by the city branch of the Fairmount Park Art association. It had been intended to grace the great Central Free Library building that is now planned as one of the buildings along the Parkway. While it was lying unused Clark park was opened, and the statue was mounted there.

The Wrong Verse.

A man who was staying at home during the past summer, not having received his weekly letter from his wife, thought he would be smart and send her a quotation from the Bible that would surely bring a letter by next mail. Not having a Bible handy, he depended on his memory and wrote as follows:

My Dear Wife—Proverbs xxv, 24.

JOHN.

He did not get any more letters. When his wife returned he asked her why she had not written. She showed him his quotation. He looked at his Bible and said:

"Oh, Lord! I quoted the wrong verse. It should have been Prov. xxv, 25."—Life.

Perversity of Nature.

His father was busy and had cautioned him not to ask any foolish questions so he said to the boy when he came into the room:

"As long as this isn't a fool question, what is it?"

And this is what the boy propounded:

"When you've a sore throat, dad, and it hurts you to swallow, why do you want to swallow all the time?"—New York Times.

An Ordinance.

Granting the Milesburg Electric Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, the right to construct, operate and maintain poles, wires, cables and fixtures, together with the necessary supports upon, over, along and under the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of the Borough of Milesburg, Centre County, Pennsylvania.

BE IT ORDAINED AND ENACTED by the Council of the Borough of Milesburg, County of Centre and State of Pennsylvania, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same.

SECTION 1. That the privileges be and is hereby granted in perpetuity to the Milesburg Electric Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, to construct, operate and maintain the necessary poles, wires, cables, conduits and fixtures, together with the necessary supports upon, over, along and under the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of said Borough as may be necessary for the purpose of constructing, operating and maintaining its lines through the said Borough and to the places of business, works, manufacturing establishments, offices and houses of subscribers within the Borough limits adjacent thereto, subject to the conditions and regulations hereinafter contained.

SECTION 2. That the said Milesburg Electric Company shall replace the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of said Borough upon which it may place any of its poles, conduits, lines or fixtures as aforesaid, in as good condition as they were before said poles and fixtures were erected thereon, and further, that all poles and fixtures as aforesaid shall be placed wherever practicable on alleys, and the location of said poles and conduits shall be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Committee of the Council of the Borough aforesaid.

SECTION 3. That all poles erected under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be reasonably straight, painted and kept painted, and that no cross arms for the suspension of wires or cables shall be placed at a less distance than twenty feet from the grade of the street, unless by permission of said Council.

SECTION 4. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall pay a pole tax of twenty (20) cents per pole per year to the Borough of Milesburg, and the said Borough shall have the privilege free of charge to erect wires for fire and police purposes on the poles of the said Milesburg Electric Company.

SECTION 5. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall commence work within one (1) year and complete the erection of their plant in the Borough of Milesburg within two (2) years from the date of this Ordinance, otherwise this Ordinance becomes null and void and of no effect.

SECTION 6. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall be liable for all damages by reason of erecting, operating and maintaining its plant in the Borough of Milesburg, Pennsylvania.

SECTION 7. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall be governed by all legal ordinances of a general nature now in force or that may hereafter be enacted.

SECTION 8. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall, within thirty days after the passage and approval of this ordinance, file with the Secretary of Council its certificate of acceptance of all the terms, conditions and provisions of this ordinance, and that the said Company shall pay the expenses incident to the passage and publication thereof.

SECTION 9. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same conflicts with this ordinance.

The Devil's Tower.

In a government bulletin describing the geology and water resources of the Black Hills of South Dakota and Wyoming Mr. N. H. Darton describes the imposing mass of igneous rock known as the Devil's tower. Rising 600 feet above the surrounding country, the shaft is one of the most conspicuous natural objects in the Black Hills region. Its nearly perpendicular sides are fluted by great rock columns, some of which are six feet in diameter. The tower is situated on the west bank of the Belle Fourche river, south of Hulett, Wyo., and is one of several bold buttes left by erosion in the northern Black Hills. In the opinion of some geologists Devil's tower is connected with lower strata by an underlying vent.

The Great Siberian Refrigerator.

To appreciate the severity of the climate of northern Siberia it is only necessary to understand the practical purposes it is made to serve. The entire country is used as a refrigerator for the preserving of articles of food. One day a traveler, dining at Tomsk on a plump fowl, asked how long the bird had been killed. The landlord evidently softened his reply as much as possible, knowing the repugnance of most foreigners to any food not quite fresh.

"Two months only," he said; "not a day more."

No precautions are required for the preservation of beef, for it takes care of itself. Nearly all butchers kill at the beginning of the cold weather a sufficient number of animals to furnish provisions for the entire winter and allow the meat to freeze. There is no fear of any food changing in such a temperature. Fish become so solid and stiff that they are set up on their tails against the walls of the market.—Exchange.

A Curious Species of Birds.

Among the curious birds of the East Indies is a species that is nearly extinct. These birds always travel in pairs that are hardly ever separated. The beak of the male is short and strong, while that of the female is fine, long and curved. The male's work is to break with his strong bill the tough bark of trees in order that his mate may introduce her pointed beak into the holes dug into the trunk by insects and so extract food. When the male detects an "insect haunt" he lays it bare, and the female pulls forth the prey with her beak, divides it in two, gives the male his portion and eats the other, continuing the process until both have had enough. Consequently the death of one or the other means starvation to the survivor, the female being unable to break the bark of trees and the male to take out the prey when its presence is exposed.

"Hard" Drinking Water.

Many persons have long believed that it is injurious to the health to drink "hard" water. Medical authorities now assert that there is no foundation for the belief, and some maintain that hard water is even superior to soft water for drinking purposes. They point out the fact that ordinary food contains a great deal more lime than is to be found in even a larger quantity of water than any one would be likely to drink. Gout is said to occur alike among those who do and those who do not drink hard water. According to the statistics quoted in the London Engineer, the death rate in "hard water towns" is actually less than in "soft water towns." It is also the fact that most of the natural waters that have proved valuable in treating diseases attributed to the drinking of hard water themselves contain no small proportion of lime salts.

Bothering a Duelist.

Brantome, a French author, in "Dueling Stories of the Sixteenth Century," tells of the code then in vogue. It was allowed in the challenge to stipulate as many different weapons as one pleased without specifying the particular ones with which one would actually fight. The antagonist was bound to provide himself with all. One duelist insisted "on the provision of no less than thirty different kinds of armament, for foot and horseback; nay, he even specified the kind of horse—coursers, blood horses from Spain and Turkey, thoroughbreds, cobs, some in harness with ears and tail clipped, some saddled in jennet style, some with heavy plated armor and so on. The object was not only to take his adversary by surprise, but to put him to enormous expense and exhaust his resources."

A Frank Critic.

Louis XIV., who, like many humble rimesters, somewhat overrated his poetical powers, showed a copy of verses to Boileau and asked his candid opinion of them.

"Ah, sire," said the poet, "I am more convinced than ever that nothing is impossible to your majesty. You desired to write some poor rimes, and you have succeeded in making them positively detestable!"

James Gow, Pirate.

The original of Captain Cleveland in Scott's novel "The Pirate" was James Gow, who for many years terrorized the Orkneys and who was finally captured by a trick and was hanged in June, 1725. Defoe, by the way, wrote a conscientious account of his exploits and execution, the sole known copy of which is now in the British museum.

He Knew Him When—

"Why do you hate him so? Has he ever done anything or said anything to injure you?"

"No, but, confound him, I can remember when he had nowhere near as much as I had—when, as a matter of fact, I didn't always care to recognize him."—Chicago Record-Herald.

In the Cause of Freedom.

"I told the lawyer I wanted an absolute divorce," said Mrs. Flimgilt.

"And what did he say?"

"He told me he was an old friend of my husband and as a favor to him he would take the case."—Washington Star.

Not That Kind.

"A man should strive to be satisfied with his lot."

"That's a hard thing to do when his lot happens to lie under a suburban frog pond."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

No man gets rich whose pocket is a flag station instead of a terminal.—Youth's Companion.

Those Unnecessary Questions.

The damage suit was on, and Biddad's chauffeur was testifying for the plaintiff.

"Now, you say," said the pompous lawyer for the defendant, "that at this point the two cars traveling at the rate of thirty miles an hour came together head on. Then what did you do?"

The witness gazed wearily at his questioner.

"Why," said he, "I turned to my wife, who was brushing the baby's hair in the tonneau, and I said that I thought the dumplings must be done by this time"—

Bang! interrupted the judge's gavel. "Stenographer," said his honor, "strike that fool answer from the record."

"And doesn't the question go with it, judge?" asked the witness meekly.

"Sure!" said his honor, forgetting the dignity of his calling for the moment.—Harper's.

Using a King as an Advertisement.

When P. T. Barnum invited the king of the Sandwich Islands to show in the city of New York he was not satisfied with that, which was itself an advertising card, but he managed by advising the king to step with him in one of the chariots—so as to see better a certain part of the performance—to hurry it up in a moment of confusion and sweep the king around the entire circuit of the track. The papers the next day had a notice of the king of showmen and the king of the Sandwich Islands in a chariot race. He could not have written as good an advertisement as the racy news item made. It was a neat exploit, for, small as the king's kingdom was, his sense of his dignity as a monarch was not small, and only by indirection and on behalf of a supposed different motive could he have been induced to become part of such a spectacle.

Shark Spearing.

Shark spearing is a profitable industry in Malaysia, though attended by an element of danger and no end of excitement. The chief value of the fish is its liver, which yields an oil that is refined in Europe and sold as cod liver oil. In October the ocean sharks come into the lagoon, between the barrier reef and the atolls, to pair. At this time they can be speared in large numbers by people skilled in catching them. There are several species of these sharks, and they ordinarily run from seven to fifteen feet in length. The liver of a shark of this size gives about five gallons of oil. The sharks are found in pairs, and the harpooners try to kill the male first, in which case they are able also to spear the female, as it does not desert its mate.—Argonaut.

Warding Off Old Age.

A famous French general when asked how it was that he had such an erect carriage replied that it was because he bent over and touched the floor with his fingers thirty times every day. If he had acquired rigidity of the spine so that he could not do that he would have had with it weak abdominal muscles, which result in portal congestion. This portal congestion interferes with stomach digestion and with the action of the liver. The poison destroying power of the liver is lessened, auto intoxication results, and arteriosclerosis and old age come on at a much earlier day. But by keeping the spine flexible and the abdominal muscles strong and taut the portal circulation is kept free, and old age is held off.

Returned Empty.

"Why had that boy so long to wait, Jane?" asked the mistress of her servant, who had just taken in a siphon of soda water.

"Please, mum, he waited for the bottle," cheerily replied Jane.

"Bottle! What bottle?" queried her mistress.

"If yer please, mum, he asked if 'e could 'ave a returned empty, so I asked 'im to wait until I drawed it all off into a jug, and then I give 'im 'is bottle back," was the reassuring reply.—London Ideas.

Tooth Powder.

Here is a good tooth powder recommended by a professor in a dental college: Mix together in a fine powder one and a half ounces of precipitated chalk, half an ounce of powdered orris, one-eighth of an ounce of powdered cuttlefish, one-eighth of an ounce of borax and one-eighth of an ounce of sugar. All these should be ground to a fine powder, especially the cuttlefish. Flavor with six drops of wintergreen.—New York Tribune.

Restless Nature.

Nothing in nature is absolutely permanent. Changes are going on slowly, but steadily, every moment, parts of the earth being elevated above the sea, parts sinking below it, the ocean wearing away the coast in one place and building it out in another, and so on to infinity.

A Use For It.

Young Hardfax—But, dad, there can't be any real harm in sowing a few wild oats. Old Hardfax—Mebbe not. 'Cause if you're as much of a donkey as I think you are you can eat the crop.—Chicago News.

Or Seem To.

"I suppose even a rich man has his troubles."

"Yes, but he can always find somebody to take an interest in them."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A vigorous plant cannot be raised without sunshine, nor can any nature be truly strong and helpful without cheerfulness.

Here and There.

One of our welcome callers last week was A. M. Woomer, of Howard.

Frank Kelly, of Altoona, is visiting relatives and friends in Bellefonte.

Academy minstrels at Garman's Opera House, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 17 and 18.

Robert Campbell, of State College, was a genial caller at "The Republican" office on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Jenkins spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lukenbach, at Tyrone.

W. J. Ammerman, of near Pleasant Gap, was a very pleasant caller at "The Republican" office on Saturday.

H. F. Alters is prepared to supply you with Pure and Sweet Ice Cream Cones at wholesale and retail.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Faust, of Altoona, are spending the week at the James Rine home, on West High Street.

George Reeser, of Winburne, attended the funeral of his sister, Mrs. John Lose, in Bellefonte, on Saturday of last week.

Miss Cora Scholl departed on Monday for Scranton, where she will visit for a time at the home of her brother, William Scholl.

Samuel Wasson, who has recently moved to near State College, was a pleasant caller at "The Republican" office on Saturday.

Thomas Smith, a Bellefonte boy who is helping State College to expand, was a visitor to town last week and while here favored us with a call.

Miss Agnes L. Orbison, of Bellefonte, who has been in Princeton, N. J., since the death of her mother, will shortly go abroad and will spend some time in Paris.

Robert Roberts, of Berwindale, was an arrival in Bellefonte on Saturday to spend several days with his wife, who has been at home for a short time with her mother, Mrs. Clara Denius, on Bishop Street.

The J. Shannon Boal property in Centre Hall, which was owned by Dr. McCluney Radcliffe, of Philadelphia, was recently sold to Mrs. Caroline Geary, of Coburn, who has already taken possession.

The girls of the Katz & Co. store last Thursday evening gave a kitchen shower in honor of Miss Minnie Cherry, whose wedding will take place in the near future.

It is said that Manager Garman, of the Opera House, is arranging to produce here "Under the Red Robe," one of the best known and most successful dramas on the road.

Baseball on Friday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, on Hughes field; Bloomsburg Normal vs. Academy. This will be a good game and a large crowd should be on hand to witness it.

George S. Grimm, who has been connected with the furnaces here for a number of years, departed on Monday for Punxsutawney, where he yesterday assumed charge of his new position.

John McCoy and Ned Blanchard were business visitors to Pittsburg this week. John has taken the agency here for the Waverly oils and is planning pushing the business to the very best of his ability.

Quigley, Ex-Sheriff Hurley, Ex-Sheriff Henry Kline, J. Linn Harris, R. B. Taylor, Levi Symmonds, P. H. Harris also Philip D. Foster, of State College. Mr. Foster stopped over in Harrisburg enroute to Lancaster, where he is attending the convention of postmasters.

On Wednesday of last week Mrs. George Robb, of near Coleville, gave a little sewing party for a few friends. A chicken and waffle dinner was served and all present had a most delightful time. Those present included Mrs. Robb, Mrs. Amanda Miller, Mrs. Foster Housel, Mrs. John Kelley, Miss Mary Wann, Mrs. Ellen Miller, Mrs. Edward Roan, Mrs. Howard Oliger and Mrs. George Robb, Jr.

Frank Crissman, a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Homer Crissman, is meeting with gratifying success with the Diamond Rubber Company, at Akron, Ohio. Although he has only bee with the company eight or nine months he was last week given a nice promotion, which carries an increase in salary and increases his duties and responsibilities. Frank is a hustler and judging from the manner in which he is climbing up the ladder with the Diamond Rubber Company it would seem that he is sizing up as the right man for the place.

District Attorney D. Paul Fortney transacted business in Philipsburg this week.

S. T. Richards, of Martha, was a business visitor in town between trains on Monday.

Miss Elizabeth Cunningham, a niece of J. M. Cunningham, underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Bellefonte hospital on Saturday. The operation was a complete success and she is making a fine recovery.

Mrs. D. H. Hastings and daughter, Sarah, are scheduled to arrive in New York from Europe on Saturday. They will be met in that city by Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hickok. At Harrisburg they will be joined on Sunday by Col. and Mrs. J. L. Spangler.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church will hold the third of their series of exchanges on Saturday afternoon, May 4th., at Spigelmyer's store. Home-made bread, buns, pies, cakes, puddings, salads, candy, etc., will be on sale; also a variety of aprons.

On April 8, 1912, George W. Fink and Miss Leona Merryman, both of Taylor township, were married by Squire Vinton Beckwith. On April 24, last, Squire Beckwith also united in marriage Rufus Cupp, of Halfmoon township, and Miss Susan L. Woodle, of Taylor township.

A 14-years-old boy catching a 14-inch trout reads like fiction, but just such a thing happened a day or two ago. Vinton Riggleman, of near Port Matilda, a grandson of Squire Vinton Beckwith, was fishing along Bell Hollow run when he landed a trout that measured 14 inches and which was so heavy that it bent the boy's rod almost double.

Persons having trouble of any kind with their eyes should keep in mind the approaching visit to Bellefonte by Prof. J. Angel, the well known eyesight specialist. Prof. Angel will be at the Brockerhoff House from Wednesday morning, May 8th, until Thursday evening, May 9th, during which time his services will be at the command of all persons desiring to consult him in regard to their eyes. He announces that for this occasion he will make a reduction of 25 per cent. in his regular charges, which will afford all a good opportunity to secure treatment. He also announces that consultation and examination of eyes will be free. Parents having children in school and who may happen to apparently be not so bright as some other pupils should have their children's eyes examined. The fault may not be in the child's mind but in the eyes.

Mrs. Louisa Harris entertained on Tuesday evening.

Philip H. Garbrick, who is employed at Kane, was home for the annual convention and reunion of the old Fifth Regiment, Spanish-American war veterans. Phil. was one of the men who saw service with the regiment. Rheumatism will likely keep him here for some time.

The paving brick for the West High Street job were shipped to Bellefonte this week and are now on the ground. All that R. B. Taylor, the contractor, now wants is a few days of nice weather in order to rush the work through to completion. The putting down of the concrete sidewalks on both sides of the street will not be undertaken until the street paving is completed.

Robert D. Musser, of near Spring Mills, was in town on business yesterday. While at "The Republican" office Mr. Musser remarked that the continued wet weather had so seriously interfered with plowing that in some things not more than a fifty percent crop could be expected. He said that in all his experience he had never noticed so little plowing done by this time of the year as appeared to be the case all along the road from Spring Mills to Bellefonte.

The Bell Telephone Company has rented the store room in the Bush Arcade, adjoining the new Arcade billiard room, and dnring the next few days will convert it into a general business office. The Bell company some time ago took over the Western Union Telegraph Company, the two concerns now being under the one management. The consolidation includes the two offices in Bellefonte. It is the intention to use the first floor store room in the Bush Arcade as an office for the Western Union and also for public telephones. The second floor quarters of the Bell company will be retained and used as operating and traffic departments.

Bellefonte Lodge, No. 206, Loyal Order of Moose, will on Tuesday evening, May 14th., hold its second annual banquet in the new club rooms in the McClain block, opposite the Bush House. Covers will be laid for several hundred, the wives, mothers, sisters and friends of members to be among those present. The function is being handled with no little enthusiasm by the members and they are looking forward to the banquet great interest. In addition to serving as a house-warming, the banquet will afford those not members a splendid opportunity to visit and inspect the new home of the Moose, which by the way is most comfortably and nicely arranged.

With the departure on Monday of George S. Grimm, for Punxsutawney, Linn Blackford has been placed in general charge of both the Bellefonte and Nittany furnaces here. Each day witnesses quite large shipments of pig iron from the two furnaces, and little by little the mammoth pile of iron on hand when the plants shut down is being reduced. At the present rate of shipments it would not be at all surprising should the stock on hand be entirely disposed of by the first of August or September. Such a condition, coupled with a healthy increase in the price of pig iron, would undoubtedly hasten the day for resuming operations at the Bellefonte furnace, at least. The assumption is that when the word to resume work is given it will apply to the Bellefonte furnace, first. Keeping track of all repair work, together with shipping pig iron and giving the two furnaces general supervision, is a responsible assignment, and the fact that all this has been entrusted to Mr. Blackford speaks for itself as evidence of his ability and the high regard in which he is held by his employers.
